NEW QUESTION: 2

An organization plans to deploy a spine/leaf network topology to support a cloud design. Leaf switches will use layer-3 protocols to communicate with the spine switches. Hosts will each connect to two leaf switches using layer-2 protocols. Which technology must be enabled between the host and leaf switches to provide the maximum throughput for a single data stream?

- A. Equal-Cost Multi-Path Routing
- B. Multi-Chassis Aggregation
- C. Spanning Tree Protocol
- D. Generic Network Virtualization Encapsulation

Answer: D

Explanation:

Generic Network Virtualization Encapsulation (Geneve) is the peacemaking protocol drafted to unify VXLAN, NVGRE, and whatever other tunneling protocols emerge for network virtualization. Geneve doesn't exactly replace VXLAN and other protocols. Rather, it provides a common superset among them, so that outside software can provide hooks to Geneve rather than having to accommodate multiple encapsulation standards. Note: NVGRE (Network Virtualization using Generic Routing Encapsulation) is a network virtualization technology that attempts to alleviate the scalability problems associated with large cloud computing deployments. It uses Generic Routing Encapsulation (GRE) to tunnel layer 2 packets over layer 3 networks. Its principal backer is Microsoft.
