Examine the line from /etc/rsyslog.conf:

```
Mail.*-/var/log/maillog

Which statement correctly describes this rule?

- A. The filename prefix of "-" is a performance enhancement. It stops file syncing on every message. The log content will be the same whether a minus prefix is used or not.
- B. The file name prefix of "-" is a way of disabling mail log messages under certain conditions to /var/log/maillog.
- C. The file name prefix of "-" forces file syncing after every message is logged to ensure each message is written to disk before attempting to write a subsequent message to the same file.
- D. The rule name prefix of "-" is tolerated for syslog and syslog.sys compatibility with no impact on rsyslog behavior regardless of the global directive settings.

Answer: C

Explanation:

```
* # Log all the mail messages in one place. mail.*
```

```
~/var/log/maillog
```

*Example:

To select all kernel syslog messages with any priority, add the following text into the configuration file:

```
kern.*
```

*Example 2:

the following rule is comprised of a selector that selects all cron syslog messages and an action that saves them into the /var/log/cron.log log file:

```
cron.* /var/log/cron.log
```

Note:

*For those files that are controlled by the system logging daemon rsyslogd, the main configuration file is /etc/rsyslog.conf, which contains global directives, module directives, and rules.

*The main configuration file for rsyslog is /etc/rsyslog.conf. Here, you can specify global directives, modules, and rules that consist of filter and action parts.

*The most used and well-known way to filter syslog messages is to use the facility/priority-based filters which filter syslog messages based on two conditions: facility and priority separated by a comma. To create a selector, use the following syntax: FACILITY.PRIORITY where:

FACILITY specifies the subsystem that produces a specific syslog message.

PRIORITY specifies a priority of a syslog message.

You may also use an asterisk (*) to define all facilities or priorities (depending on where you place the asterisk, before or after the comma).
