NEW QUESTION: 2

Which of the following price strategies would one use if they seek to recover variable cost while enticing a buyer with a price that covers neither the fixed cost nor profit?

- A. Loss leader pricing
- B. Market based approach
- C. Market demand pricing
- D. Time and material contracts

Answer: A

Explanation:

One would use loss leader pricing if they seek to recover variable cost while enticing a buyer with a price that covers neither the fixed cost nor profit. In market demand pricing the seller determines demand and prices at a level that meets customer expectations and provides an acceptable profit. Time and material contracts allow the seller to charge an hourly rate for labor plus the cost of materials and allowable expenses. Market based approach is actually a product price structure.
