NEW QUESTION: 1

Select the key performance indicator (KPI) that provides a trend of the cost of an item as part of Gross Margin Analysis

- A. Inventory Value KPI
- B. Value Trends KPI
- C. Gross Margins KPI
- D. Item Cost KPI

Answer: D

Explanation:

Note: * Overhead Costs Expensed or Capitalized

On inbound transactions and inventory transfer transactions, overhead expenses can be absorbed and capitalized into inventory value, or the absorption can be redirected to an expense account: a credit to an absorption account and a debit to either an inventory or expense account. On outbound transactions, overhead absorption is redirected to an expense account, and will be included in the gross margin calculation. For example, consider a receipt of inventory items that cost

$10 each to purchase, and you would like to absorb overhead cost of $2 each on the inbound transaction. When the item is sold, you would like to absorb additional overhead of $3 each on the outbound transaction. The total cost of goods sold is $15 each.

*Fusion Costing analytics include support for Gross Margin Analysis, Item Cost Trend and Item Value trend, embedded in the Fusion Cost Accountant's dashboard

NEW QUESTION: 3

Which process divides the data into chunks for EMC Avamar deduplication data flow processing?

- A. Sticky-byte factoring
- B. SHA-1 Hashing
- C. Hash cache checking
- D. Compression

Answer: A

Explanation:

Assume the file HAS been changed, and therefore the hash of the file no longer matches the hash in the file cache. From here, the data will be broken into variable segment lengthsthrough Avamar's patented sticky byte factoring process. These segments are then compressed and hashed, and the resulting hash is written to a HASH CACHE file locally on the client. This file is also loaded into RAM when a backup is initiated.

Avamar, has a rather nifty technology called Sticky Byte Factoring which allows it to identify the changed information inside a file by breaking the file into variable length objects, this leads to much greater efficiency than fixed size approaches as changes made early in a fixed length sequence affect all subsequent blocks/ chunks/objects/whatever in that sequence. This in turn changes all the fingerprints taken following the changeddata which means you end up with a lot of new blocks/chunks/objects/whatever even if the data really hasn't changed all that much. Sticky Byte

Factoring on the other hand can tell what exactly has changed, not just that things have changed.
